Remote Public Access

Case.net soon will let people view public court documents from their personal computers, tablets or cell phones. This works only for documents filed on or after July 1, 2023.

So, what does this mean for people filing documents in court?

STOP

To protect privacy, any confidential information in an otherwise public document must be redacted.

REVIEW

If you are filing any document in a court case – even if you are representing yourself! – it is your job to redact confidential information. The court clerk cannot help.

REDACT

- On a computer, use a redaction tool or substitute generic labels.
- By hand, use a marker or whiteout product to completely cover the confidential information.
- File an explanatory confidential redaction information sheet.
- Certify you have done any necessary redaction.

“ These improvements will fundamentally change the way individuals access public court documents, while balancing the need to protect confidential information and ensure the overall security and reliability of our underlying case management system. ~ Missouri's chief justice 28 June 2022 ”
